Centre for Interprofessional Education (IPE)

Membership Program

Vision

Transforming care through collaboration

Mission

This academic centre will develop a curriculum to provide health professional students with the core competencies needed for the provision of interprofessional evidence-based care in a collaborative, team practice environment, and further establish the University of Toronto (UT), the University Health Network (UHN), and partners, as a national and international leader in interprofessional education.

Membership Categories & Criteria

Membership for the Centre for Interprofessional Education (IPE) is free for those that are interested in promoting and enhancing IPE through facilitation, professional development, research, and education leadership. Centre for IPE members will build on the successes of the Centre through engagement, collaborative partnerships, deepening and extending leadership and support in interprofessional education, research, and practice.

Centre for IPE Membership offers benefits such as:

- A platform for networking with colleagues in the areas of interprofessional education, interprofessional care, research, and professional development;
- Opportunity to enhance facilitation and teaching skills through IPE learning activities;
- Opportunity to participate in Centre for IPE working groups and committees;
- Potential bursary opportunities for interprofessional programs/ conferences i.e. Collaborating Across Borders;
- Invitation to events sponsored by the Centre for IPE.

There are four categories of membership: General Member; Educator Member; Research Member; Associate Member.
